

This year, as a part of the Fashion Production Association at The Ohio State University, our group created a collection to honor the centennial of the Women's Suffrage movement as well as encourage young adults to vote in the upcoming 2020 election.

About this collection

In our collection, we combined elements that women wore during the Women's Suffrage Movement such as the one shouldered sash and message buttons, and merged them with elements seen in modern politics, such as the blazer and the red, white, and blue color scheme. Overall, we created this collection to use strong, female fashion to commemorate the strong women who fought so courageously to gain us the right to vote, and to use their strength to encourage and educate young adults as why it is so greatly important that we all continue to vote.
